President Lists Dorm Finish for December

The new freshman dormitory is expected to be finished in late December, according to information from the president's office released Tuesday. President Robert W. McEwen said he sees "no reasonable doubt" that the dorm would be finished by then.

The president said that though the dorm has a late December completion date, he doesn't expect any freshmen to move in until second semester of next year.

The administration is now studying costs of vacating and closing up Middle, North, or South dorms, until the increased enrollment of the College warrants reopening them. No definite moving plans have been made, although the president is certain that at least one of the dorms will be closed.

Workmen of the R. S. Noonan company are expected to begin soon on construction of the addition to the Hall of Commons. The president said he expects no serious food service interference in Commons through Commencement, although it may become increasingly difficult to serve meals there.

Because the new dorm will not be completed in time to accommodate the larger 225-man freshman class, the College is now planning on a 200-man delegation. This size class will force the College to accommodate six more students in the present dormitories.

Students Debate Total Opportunity; Senate To Decide Question Monday

by Steve Hoffman

The fate of Total Opportunity will rest with the Student Senate next Monday night when the student government body meets to accept or reject the report of the Senate's Committee on Deferred Rushing.

The committee report proposes a system of preferential bidding, with quotas for each fraternity and a guarantee that any freshman who wishes may receive a bid.

No clear indication can be made on whether or not the report will be accepted. Most social group representatives to the Senate have polled their constituents and are expected to vote as instructed.

An informal poll made by the Spectator yesterday shows that the votes of the social groups is expected to be 7 - 6 for the proposal. Student sentiment seems to be evenly divided.

Proponents of Total Opportunity cite as the main advantages of the plan the chance for fraternities to "continue to have a valuable and significant place on the campus," by giving everyone a chance to be a part of the social life of the College.

Opposition to the plan comes partly from fraternity members who say that Total Opportunity would force on fraternities men whom they would not want to take and would thus interfere with a fraternity's right to choose its own members.

A smaller segment of campus opinion supports a set of proposals made Monday by junior Dick Flanagan in a student discussion sponsored by the Spectator. Flanagan urged the student body to reject the plan because it did not guarantee that fraternities would not practice racial and religious discrimination.

Many students are disputing the advisability of a Student Senate vote deciding the issue. They claim that since Senate members include class presidents and representatives-at-large, the body does no accurately represent the feelings of the social groups on the Hill.

This group wants a vote of the entire student body to decide the issue. The Senate last week rejected the idea by 10 to 4. Petitions now circulating among the students are asking the Senate to poll all the students before deciding the issue.

The National Interfraternity Council has noted the Hamilton plan in a memorandum sent to the executive secretaries of national fraternities having chapters at Hamilton.

The NIC memo outlines the main features of the plan, noting that the Senate intends to vote on the matter Mar. 24. It is signed by Herbert L. Brown, chairman of the NIC Autonomy Committee and neither supports nor argues against the plan.

STONE WORK PROGRESSES — Stone masons are shown laying dolomite veneer on the south wing of the new freshman dormitory. The interior wall is poured concrete. Completion date for the new dorm has now tentatively been set for sometime in late December. See story below.

Rejects Motion For Student Poll On Rushing Plan

The Student Senate Monday evening, by a vote of 10 to 4, defeated a motion of Dick Alofs permitting a student body vote on the adoption of 100 per cent rushing opportunity.

The total opportunity plan, as set forth by the Deferred Rushing Committee, will be voted on by the Senate this coming Monday evening. If acceped by a majority of the Senate, the plan will go into effect during 1959 - 1960.

Alofs and Bill Driscoll urged that the student body itself be permitted to vote on 100 per cent opportunity.

Senate president Art Melius and Jack Caldwell, in reply, explained that the students must vote on amendments to the Senate constitution but that resolutions and moions, such as the total-opportunity plan, are ordinarily dealt with by the Senate.

Melius added, however, that the Senate could turn the report over to the student body for a vote, if the group so desired.

Most Senate representatives, especially Melius, Caldwell, Paul Goetz, Dudley Hawkes, Joel Ingegno and Tim Scholl, were opposed to a student-body vote.

Melius and Hal Bruck urged representatives to keep the vote within the Senate while carefully considering house and class opinion.

Caldwell pointed out that the Senate, like the United States Congress, cannot refer back to the electors on every issue.

Goetz declared that a student-body vote would negate the purpose for which the Senate exists. He added that representatives, while obligated to consider student opinion, may vote any way they please.

Hawkes, in opposing a student-body vote, said that Senate representatives are well-informed on the total-opportunity issue while many students are not; he urged Senate members to convey their familiarity with the issue to house members.

Ingegno added that the students have faith in their Senate representatives.

Scholl said that the Senate is not seeking power; he declared that representatives "are not just to do the dirty work, but everything that concerns the student body."

Both Melius and Bill Driscoll expressed a hope for more than a simple majority vote on so important an issue.

Dave McMillan, chairman of the Deferred Rushing Committee, reported that earlier in the evening members of his committee had met in the Chapel to discuss the total-opportunity report with about 30 students.

In other Senate business, Melius reported that the temporary Judiciary Committee had met with Associate Dean Wertimer the preceding Tuesday to consider further amendments to the social rules.

Tony Alcaro substituted for Rick Hatch; Bill Driscoll, for Phil Hooper; and Bernie Mikell, for John Plant.

Blake To Give 6th Morron Talk In Chapel Sunday

The Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, executive officer of the Presbyterian Church, will present the sixth and final lecture in Hamilton's Morron Lecture Series Sunday evening at 7:30 in the Chapel. Dr. Blake will seak on "The Ecumenical Movement Today."

Earlier speakers in this annual series, which is provided by an endowed lectureship in religious thought, have discussed the witnesses of the Roman, reformed confessional, reformed free and younger churches and those of the sects.

Dr. Blake's title is Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. As such, he is the executive officer of the General Assembly, which is the supreme governing body of the church.

A graduate of Princeton Theological Seminary, he has held pastorates in New York, Albany and Pasadena, Cal. From 1954 until last year he was president of the National Council of the Churches of Christ. He is a member and former chairman of the board of trustees of the San Francisco Theological Seminary and is on the board of the Lawrenceville School and of Princeton Theological Seminary.

Debaters Sponsor School Tourney

Eight high schools will participate in a debate tournament at Hamilton Saturday, Tournament Chairman Dave Eastham announced Wednesday. The tournament will decide the regional champion of the New York High School Forensic League. It will be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The topic which the teams will debate is Resolved: United States foreign aid should be substantially increased. The tournament will be held in various classrooms and will be judged by Hamilton students.

No prizes will be awarded to the winning teams, but the top winners will be allowed to compete in the state finals at Albany.

Schools which will be represented in the meet are Utica Free Academy, Catholic Academy, St. Francis, New Hartford, Norwich, Binghamton, Seton High and Oriskany Falls.

Also this weekend Rusty Herbsman and Dick Flanagen will debate in an intercollegiate meet at Holy Cross. Flanagan and Herbsman debate on both sides of the issue at this meet.

Radcliffe Choral Society and Choir To Sing in Troy, Utica, Cazenovia

The College Choir will sing in three combined concerts with the Radcliffe Choral Society this weekend. The two choirs sing in Troy tonight, in Utica tomorrow, and in Cazenovia Mar. 23.

Friday night at 8:30 p.m. the choirs will present a concert at the Troy Music Hall. The concert will be sponsored by the Northeastern New York State Hamilton Alumni Association.

The combined choirs will sing choruses from Bach's Mass in B minor, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, director of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club. John L. Baldwin, Hamilton director, will accompany on the organ.

The opening half of the program will be devoted to selections by each choir. Featured numbers by Radcliffe are Adoramus Te, Christe by Palestrino and two choruses from L'Allegro by Handel. Among the Hamilton selections are A Dirge for Two Veterans by Holst and Crucifixus by Lotti.

Following the concert the Radcliffe girls will travel to Hamilton, where they will spend the night in faculty homes. They will be on the Hill all day Saturday. A reception is planned for them in the afternoon.

Saturday night at 8:30 p.m. the choirs will repeat their performance of the previous night at the Westminster Presbyterian Church in Utica.

The choirs travel to Cazenovia Sunday for a concert in the Cazenovia High School at 2:30 p.m. The program will be sponsored by the Cazenovia Concert Association.

College Thanked For Cooperation In Blood Drive

The Utica chapter of the American National Red Cross this week expressed its thanks to the Hamilton student body for its "strong sense of community responsibility" in donating 126 pints of blood here Mar. 7 in a Was Los-sponsored drive.

Mrs. Irene Simon, blood program coordinator, also expressed in a letter to Dean Winton Tolles her thanks for the "closest sort of cooperation" from Was Los in handling the details in the drive.

Mrs. Simon added, ". . . we have no cause to worry about our Hamilton visit because we know the recruitment work will be carried out with dispatch."

Senior Write-Ups Due Next Friday

Senior write-ups for the Hamiltonian are due Friday, Mar. 28, Senior Section Editor Ken Burke announced Tuesday.

All write-ups must be typewritten and double-spaced, and should be from 200 to 250 words long. A list of the senior's activities should accompany each write-up.

They may either be given to the man collecting them in each house and Commons or placed in the Hamiltonian box in Root Hall.

Was Los Requests

Was Los has requested that all sophomores attend Chapel Tuesday, Mar. 25.

A D Elects

Results of the February Alpha Delt elections of officers for this semester are as follows: Ran Miner, president; Al Lord, vice president; Donn Andre, treasurer.

Al Reed was elected recording secretary, Fred Nichols, corresponding secretary, Tom Putnam to the literary chair, and Al Reed historian.

T K E Officers

TKE recently held an election of officers who will take office after spring vacation.

Results of the election are Craig Pritchard, president; Doug Clark, vice president; and Paul Englund, treasurer.

FACULTY FRANKLY APPRAISED —

Senior Write-ups Perennially Amusing

by Tom Kunichika

Each spring a representative of the Hamiltonian informs seniors that their write-ups for the yearbook must be handed in. This year the Library has emphasized the matter by displaying the write-up of an alumni lecturer, pointing out the virtues of having these so-called write-ups.

Therefore, almost every senior writes about another senior. In 200 to 250 words he tries to include, usually in as amusing a way as possible, academic achievements or failures, idiosyncracies, and possibly humorous anecdotes about his subject. He tries, in short, to "capture the personality" of whomever he is writing about.

Esoteric Account

The result of the write-up is, therefore, often an esoteric account of a person, and generally very few outside of the subject's acquaintances comprehend all the nuances that are made.

In the years that follow, we suppose that it might be amusing to [illegible] through our record of college [illegible] to read these over again. Perhaps they may even evoke a chuckle here and there. Usually the references are understood best by the contemporaries of those described, but in certain cases the descriptions are timeless.

There are certain members of the faculty who are Hamilton men, and most of them had their senior write-ups. The one exception is Prof. Long. He only has his list of honors following his name.

All the other members of the faculty have write-ups, and some of these are still recognizable. We list here the write-ups of faculty members from the class of 1909 to 1942. We feel that the write-ups for the most part describe the persons well enough and need no identification.

Lemon Unfair

"Above the common herd. Also far below it. He's Chimerical. Clerked last summer at a small hotel. It has been whispered that during this time Lemon had mysterious affairs with a fille de Chambre. Claims she is a co-ed. Attends houseparties for purely educational purposes. A farmer with the hayseed carefully combed out of his hair. Ashamed of his lusts after Phi Beta Kappa. Just another of those stupid things who are apparently intelligent."

"Newt believes that Hamilton is the best small college in the country and knows that Smith is the best large one. Knows several Alpha Delts well and will speak to most of the others. Climbed out of the Ivory Tower to become the first junior to have a legal car."

Fond of Mice

"If you can't find out anything about ———— just ask the Upson Professor of Rhetoric and Oratory, or Drs. Carroll, McBride, and Gelas, who are still looking for an introduction to him. Really the best dressed man Dr. Ferry has ever turned out. . . They say he sleeps a great deal and is attractive with his oriental eyes. . . Fond of mice and travelling . . ."

"'O Rosie! How's for some spaghetti tonight'? comes Joe's familiar call across the campus. But ————, with an avowed purpose to learn French if he has to flunk every one of Bill Shep's courses to do it plunges but deeper into his book.

"Only the life of an iceman could develop so strong a character. Bought a Ford at the end of Freshman year. It stayed together till he got home. Has been on this earth twenty years and still thinks htat Westchester County is the Garden of Eden. We suspect he also thinks he's Adam. Admits, however, that Carthage is pretty close to Paradise, but—'Oh, we better go home." (We must admit that this is a vague reference. However, Alpha Delts may recognize him.)

Who Is Publius?

"A familiar figure on the campus —and one of the most omniscient. One of the few who actually know who Publius is. Presides with equanimity over all heated discussions in North. 'Cook' is rounding out his college career garnering prizes."

"G. O. A. T. (see Osborn — not H.P.; he wouldn't stand for it).

"He falls in Love as easily as he rolls off a monolog; for 'It's a wrong ———— that has no yearning.'" (This is cryptic and is probably understood only by the person it describes.)

Traveling Author

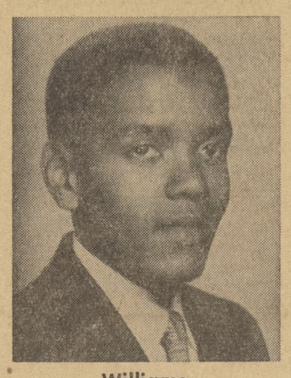
"Author of pamphlet 'How to get thru college on $700 per annum.' Cosmopolite. Address, New York, Boston, Atlantic City. Heard at Charlatans play: 'What a girlish form that sweet Mr. ———— has.' What d'ye mean, form?"

"Venus makes eloquent speeches for the standpatters. Overwhelms Wisehart with his metaphors. Considers girls a useless appendage. Snowball fiend."

"He made Carpe by dint of losing sections of his eyelashes, eyebrows, and hair, in a vain attempt to immortalize himself in a plaster of paris bust. Between trips to Wells he took up horseback riding, but weakened under the strain, and declared that if you can't ride a horse you're better off." (It isn't who you think it is.)

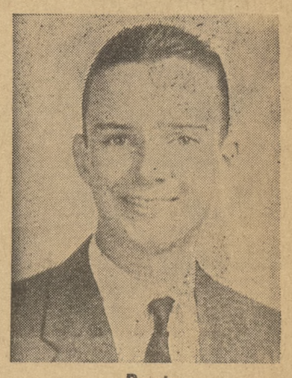
If, after reading these descriptions, you have not been able to identify the faculty members, and if you really feel you would like to know who they are, we suggest you refer to the Hamiltonians from 1909 to 1942.

Williams, Stachura, Roots Elected



Williams

Stachura



Roots

Kirby Williams was elected president of next year's sophomore class. His victory over Deming Payne, the other candidate, was announced at a class meeting held in the Chemistry Auditorium Tuesday evening. Williams, a member of ELS, is a member of the Spectator news staff and has earned a credit average for the first semester.

In the vote for vice-president, Max Stachura defeated Pete Cadigan. Stachura, rushing chairman at Squires, earned an honor average for the first semester, ranking fifth in his class.

The election for secretary-treasurer was between Logan Roots and Tom Christensen. The winner, Roots, is a member of the choir and has achieved a credit average for the first semester.

Following the elections, James Copeland proposed that the assembled delegation inform the Student Senate representative of their views on 100 per cent opportunity rushing.

After Copeland's proposal was accepted, Bill Mattern, president of the class of 1961, suggested that the freshmen of each fraternity and of Squires vote individually and then bring the results to him.

One hundred and forty-six of the class's 191 members attended the meeting.

Best Solution

STIRRED FROM ITS LETHARGY this week by the Total Opportunity discussions, the student body disturbed us with its lack of understanding of the facts and figures of deferred rushing. To summarize:

Present Fraternity membership:	545
Men eligible for fraternity membership during the year 1959-60:	470
Men eventually eligible to join fraternities: . .	525

Bluntly, the fraternities will be pinched . . . they will have 75 fewer men to choose from the first year of deferred rushing. For all the fraternities to survive financially, the fraternity-non-fraternity ratio must necessarily rise to 95.5 per cent. What happens to the five per cent? This situation will be infiinitely worse than it is now.

The past week has conjured up a host of answers to the perennial question, "What is a fraternity?" Some answers have been incomplete, some unfair and a few asinine. If a fraternity is a group of people any one of whom we would be willing to "take home to dinner," we have not been very loyal fraternity men. If a fraternity is a group of "stupid, bigoted" people, we have not been very observant.

Besides being social groups that choose their own members, fraternities at Hamilton with deferred rushing will be the social program. To leave out such a very small number of people will bring justifiable criticism on fraternities. As one of our letter writers so ably points out on page four, the basic issue is, indeed, the few who might be excluded. The very term "100 per cent opportunity" implies this. No one denies that some houses under the plan would be forced to take one or two freshmen they might not originally want.

We then ask if fraternities are not strong enough to withstand this very slight limit on their right to choose. If they cannot, they will be admitting their own lack of a sense of responsibility and their own weaknesses in not being able to foster social compatibility.

Unfortunately, the Total Opportunity plan, like any compromise, is being attacked from both extremes. Though it is admittedly no panacea for every social problem of the College, we are convinced that it is the best possible solution under the circumstances.

Minority Report

STUDENT SENATE COMMITTEE ON DEFERRED RUSHING

General Purpose: That those individuals in fraternities and out who consider racial and religious discrimination an irrational unnecessary, and morally distasteful thing should be given an opportunity to demonstrate these feelings;

II. That the plan proposed by the committee on deferred rushing (majority) is inadequate to express the feelings and purpose of those like myself who want to rid Hamilton College of racial and religious discrimination;

III. That regardless of the outcome of the voting on the committee's program, steps should be taken which can eliminate such discrimination;

IV. That those individuals who feel as the committee minority does are impatient that discrimination has existed for so long, that those who were and are in a position to do something about it are too timid to take adequate steps; that a continuation of this social cancer for any longer is wholly insupportable. The idea that a select committee of students in the second half of the 20th century should feel it necessary to treat racial and religious discrimination at Hamilton College in terms of "the long run" is indefensible.

Adoption of the following plan seems to me the minimum action which students acting collectively can take consistent with dignity and intelligence at Hamilton College in 1958.

I. That those fraternity chapters whose members retain the intellectual and moral conviction that racial and religious discrimination should be abolished at Hamilton College should publicly renounce their national policies which support such discrimination whether stated or implied;

II. That a system of equal opportunity rushing be instituted wherein a man is chosen by other men on the basis of his present or considered potential social compatability and quite regardless of his color or his religion; that the fraternities should assimilate 100 per cent of the men who desire membership;

That fraternities should support their anti-discrimination views by taking advantage of their earliest opportunity to extend an invitation to membership to a person who is of a group heretofore discriminated against on the basis of race or religion;

IV. That any chapter thus freeing itself of bigotry and being expelled from its national affiliation for so doing, should be eligible for whatever financial aid is necessary to maintain an independent existence; that this financial aid will be in the form of loans from the College until such time as fraternity alumni support will be found to be adequate.

RICHARD P. FLANAGAN

by DAVE MCMILLAN

The honor of Hamilton gentlemen appears to have been attacked. A recent story from the Wells College Grapevine reports, "Anyone venturing up to the Student Union over the weekend of the Hamilton mixer would certainly have been aghast at the various activities taking place." The news article describes checker games, co-ed swimming, but does not tell us of the activities at which we "certainly" would have been "aghast."

As a result of a party at Colgate, an aghast senior from that college wrote a letter, part of which we quote, " . . . One of our blindest traditions is that coeducation is antithetical to 'good' education . . . Clinical evidence abounds to prove that the damage done to men isolated from women is drastically telling on normal interpersonal relations . . . we soon became monks who refuse to take vows of either chastity or poverty. We must recognize that a non-coed university community is fundamentally unhealthy . . ." The whole idea sounds pretty Freudian to us.

From the coed Springfield Student comes this metphorical monstrosity, "This evening at eight o'clock, Springfield College's Southern Serenade will get up steam, knock off its moorings, and blow its Ray Ray Taylor Band-whistle as the steamboat starts on its three hour journey at the North Gym Plantation. With Captain Winter Homecoming at the wheel, the boat will provide a colorful, peaceful mood as it journeys along the musical stream." Replete with the subtle scent of honeysuckle, no doubt.

With that introduction into bad English, we offer the following poem which appears in the December issue of the American Association of University Professors Bulletin. It is by Robert Hogan of Ohio University, and is titled, "After Sending Freshmen to Describe a Tree."

Twenty inglorious Miltons looked at a tree and saw God,
Noted its "clutching fingers groping in the sod,"
Heard "Zephyr's gentle breezes wafting through her hair,"
Saw "a solemn statue," heard "a growing woody prayer,"
Saw "dancing skirts" and "the Lord's design,"
"Green arrows to God" instead of pins,
Saw symbols in squirrels, heard musings in bees,"
Not one of theMiltons saw any trees.

But, perhaps freshmen are more perceptive than this poem suggests. We heard one Hamilton freshman over the past weekend sum up the entire freshman history course as follows, "Everything which happened before the French Revolution led up to it; everything after was a result of it."

The Bulletin of the AAUP is a most amazing magazine. The December issue contains, beside the poem we have quoted, a delightful short story titled, "Minutes." The magazine also offers this little-known-fact: Basutoland has the best faculty student ratio in the world. There are 22 students in that country and 10 faculty, for a ratio of 1 professor for every 2.2 Basutoland students.

If you ever watch the afternoon movies on TV, you will realize that the local announcers show a remarkable lack of intelligence in commenting on the films they present. After a showing of "The Foxes of Harrow," one of the most moving films we know, the announcer summed up his impression of the picture (which concerns a Southern plantation) by saying, "Well, now that they have that sugar-cane cut, everything is sweetness and light." We cringed and went to English class.

The Holyoke News quotes an article by Howard Mumford Jones published in The Atlantic in which he comments, ". . . the motto of our present prevailing system of education is 'adjustment.' The freshman 'adjusts' to his college. The sophomore 'adjusts' to his professors and by and by the senior is supposed to 'adjust' to the outside world; nobody asks why." Perhaps they don't ask, but we should ask.

Six Smith girls did not adjust recently when they consented to take part in an Amherst production of the mature French play, "La Ronde." The Smith officials, properly adjusted and shocked, had the girls withdraw when the scandal was discovered.

Lambda Chi Alpha Host for Conclave

The Hamilton Chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha will be host to the annual Empire Conclave meeting on Mar. 21 - 22.

About 40 guests, including Lambda Chi's from Alfred, RPI, Colgate, Cornell and Syracuse, officials from the national organization and guests from the College will meet to hear speeches and to hold group discussions concerning fraternity life in general and with respect to the various colleges represented.

The delegates will discuss such topics as scholarship, public relations, rushing and fraternity finances. The meeting will adjourn to a banquet at Trinkaus Manor Saturday evening.

THIRTY DISCUSS PROPOSAL –

Students Argue 100% Rushing

by JOHN NAYLOR

Monday evening in the Chapel, the Deferred Rushing Committee of the Student Senate held a discussion of the plan for 100 per cent Opportunity which it recently drafted. The discussion, sponsored by The Spectator, was attended by approximately 30 men, representing nine of the houses on the Hill.

In his introduction to the discussion, Dave McMillan, chairman of the committee, pointed out that, unlike the Board of Trustees' decision to adopt deferred rushing for 1959-60, the responsibility for any plan of Total Opportunity had been left to the student body.

Don't Argue

Although the Committee feels that the Trustees have made a mistake in their timing of deferred rushing midway in the second semester, McMillan stressed that this body was one "with whom students do not argue."

Because of the limitations on fraternity membership caused by deferred rushing, Total Opportunity, McMillan said, is the most feasible plan the College could follow.

Dudley Hawkes, a member of the committee, claimed that Total Opportunity is the modern way of rushing. Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan have adopted this plan. The Committee's plan,he said, incorporates the best features found in Total Opportunity as practiced at these colleges.

Steve Hoffman, moderator of the discussion, then asked for questions from the floor. Dick Flanagan was asked if he had any plan based upon his dissenting opinion to the committee report. Flanagan offered such an alternate proposal, printed in its entirety on page two.

Ultimate Goal

Clarifying his proposal, he stated his conviction that the ultimate goal of Total Opportunity is the abolition of discriminatory clauses in all Hamilton chapters. The committee, he said, has compromised this goal by recognizing the fraternity's claim to selectivity.

Flanagan stressed that 100 per cent membership should be "a means to an end," an end which the majority report does not provide. The majority report claims that Total Opportunity could bring about the abolition of discrimination over a long period of time, but Flanagan maintained that a "possibility" was not enough. "The necessary action to rid ourselves of stupid, bigoted discrimination must be taken now," he concluded.

'Basically Impractical'

McMillan, speaking on behalf of the majority report, said that Flanagan's proposal is "basically impractical and, to an extent, unfair." The majority, he said, believes that Total Opportunity itself is the goal, and if this goal is achieved, a real and great step forward will have been accomplished. Eventually, we will rid ourselves of discrimination also, because sooner or later a house will have to take a member of a minority group against which it had formerly discriminated.

Violate Rights

Any further pressure, such as Flanagan suggested, would violate the rights of fraternities, McMillan said. Fraternities have a right to work within their nationals to abolish the national's policy of discrimination as several Hamilton chapters are attempting to do. "Flanagan's radical proposal," he concluded, "will cause all this good work to go for naught. Our proposal is the greatest possible step at this time."

Jack Caldwell, a member of the committee, reminded Flanagan that the chance to formulate a plan for Total Opportunity had been given to the students by the Trustees. Any plan which the students agree on must be palatable to the Trustees also. This body does not want to use its power to compel the fraternities to rid themselves of discrimination.

Defines Fraternity

Jack Stanton rose to address the audience and the committee on his view of the issues involved in the proposal. He defined a fraternity as "a group, each member of whom you would be glad to invite home for dinner."

The goal of a fraternity, he claimed to be "compatible friendship." Total Opportunity throws a stumbling block on this goal. Stanton said that Total Opportunity does now exist, once we understand the difference between opportunity and achievement. Every freshman has the opportunity to join a fraternity, but some fail in the achievement.

Stanton said that the sole criterion or membership is "the degree to which they would be congenial within a group." Once this criterion is abandoned, neither the boy nor the house will be happy. When we lose selectivity, he said, fraternities will cease to exist and social clubs will take their place.

Raps Voting Practice

Stanton went on to criticize the voting practices of the Student Senae in relation to this fraternity matter. He pointed out that two fraternities have three votes, while three others have two votes. He criticized the "right of the sophomore representative-at-large, for example," to vote in this matter. "Whom does he represent anyway?" he asked. He suggested that the student body vote on this matter.

Flanagan commented that since the fraternity is the only social unit on the campus, it has no right to leave anyone out of the social life. He criticized Stanton for use of the term "selectivity" when discrimination was implied.

Has No Say

McMillan said, in regard to the question of voting, that his committee had no say as to who should vote. The Deferred Rushing Committee is responsible to the Senate, and McMillan therefore suggested that Stanton expound his views to the Senate. McMillan did state, however, that he felt "the Student

ELS, TKE Teams Capture Cage, Kegling Championships

INTRAMURAL SPIRIT — Cheerleaders and a sort-of band sparked the sideline show put on by members of Psi U at Monday's intramural basketball finals. In spite of the spirit, Psi U bowed to ELS for the basketball championship.

With completion of action during the past week, the winter intramural season came to a close for another year. Competition was keen in both divisions of the basketball league, and the championship of the bowling league was settled in the final match of the season.

In the 13-team bowling league, TKE finished in first place with a record of 40 - 8 followed by TDX at 37 - 11. DP finished in third with 35 - 13, followed by ELS, 32 - 16; Psi U, 29 - 15; Squires, 27 - 21; LXA, 25 - 23; Sig, 22 - 22; ADP, 21 - 27; Chi Psi, 19 - 29; Independents, 8 - 40; DKE, 5 - 39; and DU, 4 - 40.

Lou Mantrom of TKE dominated individual honors in league play, throwing the three highest triples and the two highest single high game scores, his best being 619 and 257 respectively. Mantrom also had the highest average in the league, finishing with a score of 181.05.

Runner-up was Ward Wettlaufer of Sig with 162.28, followed by Al Pierce of ADP at 160.28, John Murphy of Psi U at 157.23, Bob Sanderson of Psi U at 156.22, Paul Goetz of DP at 156.18, Bob Simpson of LXA 155.13, Leon Gane of TKE 155.11, John Rawls of Psi U 153.15, and Mead Northrup of TDX 152.13.

The change from a two-division league to a single unit coupled with the necessary lengthening of the schedule proved to negate the effect of upsets to a large extent and guaranteed that the top team won.

In the basketball playoffs between ELS and Psi U, ELS won the championship game 46 - 29. Art Melius was high point man for ELS with 18 while Scott Finegan had 12 for the losers. In the consolation game, DKE routed DU to capture third place in the league.

TIME OUT

by Toby Winiarski

The ice is gone from the Sage Rink, and the Spring sports schedule has already appeared. We would, however, like to go back and look at the seniors that the three winter sports coaches will lose through graduation.

Before the hockey season was half over, Greg Batt had already lost the services of Phil Thorp for the season's duration. This was to have been Thorp's year, and he started out strong on the first line. In the six games he played, he scored five goals and assisted on one other. Then a knee injury forced him out of action, and cut short what was to be his top season.

A big loss on next year's hockey team will be Captain Doug Chapman. About him Coach Batt said, "He wasn't a strong player when he came to college, but in four years he worked into a top defenseman in poise and ability. He was the backbone of our defense, but perhaps even more important was the respect he earned from his opponents."

His ability won him recognition in the Colby Christmas Tournament, and as a defenseman he was third high scorer on the team this season, with a total of 15 points. For the hockey fans who attended home games faithfully, Chapman was a fixture on the ice, playing nearly 60 minutes of every game.

The swimming team loses three good men in co-captains Bob Miller and Vic Hopkins, and breast stroker Bruce Hall. Miller holds the pool record of the 200 yard butterfly with a time of 2:48.6, and Hall, who lettered for four years, was the team's leading breast stroker.

We asked Coach Chip Hunter what he could say about Hopkins. "He had nothing but sheer determination and guts," Hunter replied. "I wish all my swimmers for next year would take a lesson from Vic. I wish I could have him for another season," he added. "He was just beginning to come into his own. I have nothing but praise for him."

The biggest loss, however, comes in basketball. When we talked with Coach Ken Patrick on the phone the other night he said, "I'd rather not think about it. The boys came a long way. They worked as a unit, three of them for three years."

"Not enough can be said about John Glezen," Patrick went on, "Sportswriters all over the area regarded him as an excellent player." Glezen was a top defensive rebounder. Basketball fans might wonder why he was not an offensive rebounder as well. Patrick explained that in order to get the benefit of his one-hand push shot, he had to be outside, and opponents learned all too well his accuracy from the outside.

Frank O'Brien was always a late starter because of football injuries. He came on strong, however, and developed into a fine shot. Both he and Glezen were named to the all Utica College Opponent team.

John Driscoll, the club's other co-captain along with Glezen, was a steady, dependable ballplayer. "He always covered the opposition's big man," said Patrick, "and he did an outstanding job against Clarkson and St. Lawrence. He and O'Brien covered our offensive boards when Glezen was outside."

Rick Purple came on to play regularly this season. "He always wanted to be outside," said Patrick, "and I wanted him inside. He proved he could drive from the outside especially against Union. This year he was the most improved ballplayer on the club."

One more look might be taken at the nine seniors — a scholastic one. Five of them made honor, and one made credit. That's a pretty fair shooting percentage in any league.

PRACTICE MEET SUCCESSFUL —

Track Team To Travel Tomorrow

Tomorrow at 3 p.m. the Hamilton indoor track squad will run its fourth meet of the season against Union in the Union field house in Schenectady. In preparation for the encounter Gene Long's squad ran an unofficial practice meet against some of the Syracuse track team last Saturday in the Sage Building.

Since this was only a practice meet there are no team scores available. Results of the individual events were nip and tuck through the afternoon. In the 60-yard dash Hal Bruck defeated Norman of Syracuse in 6.5 seconds: Terry Eld ran a close second to Boyd of Syracuse in the 660 yard run, finishing in 1:33.

The mile run provided one of the highlights of the afternoon. Hamilton's Bill Poole was pitted against a Syracuse miler. It was a close race all the way with the Syracuse runner winning by .5 seconds with a time of 4:35.5. Poole was right on his heels with 4:36. Coach Long commented that this was the fastest mile he had ever seen run in the Sage Building since he has been at Hamilton.

Bruck, Payne, George, and Wilkins ran for Hamilton in the sprint medley relay; the winning time was 1:55.1. Hudson, Wilcox, McMartin and Mosedale ran the distance relay and were bested by the visitors in 11:35. Brown of Syracuse outdistanced Hamilton's Mal MacClinchie in the shot put with a toss of 40 ft. in the only field event of the afternoon.

The Union meet this Saturday promises to provide some close races. The 60-yard dash will feature Bruck of Hamilton and Union's Cole, who have been running thrillers against each other for three years. Also running for Hamilton will be Benjamin and Wilkins. Bill Poole will be paired with Union's Lewis in the mile race. Terry Eld will run the hurdles and the 600-yard run. Poole will probably run the mile and the 1000-yard run. Coach Long planned to use the same freshman relay team that beat Union but came in second to Buffalo State at the Union Invitation meet.

Baseball Team Taking Shape; Eight Lettermen Return, 17 Freshmen Out

The 1958 Hamilton baseball team is taking shape as a promising group Coach Greg Batt said last Wednesday. He commented that this year's team will probably have quite a bit of potential both offensively and defensively.

At present there are 36 men practicing with the team, eight of whom are returning lettermen. The ball club is made up of underclassmen for the most part, including 17 freshmen.

The team will open its season against Hobart Wednesday, Apr. 23, here. Several positions in the starting line-up will remain the same as last year, while others will be changed, both by the shifting of players and by the incoming freshmen.

Batt added that since the team had not had any practice outdoors, it is difficult to tell exactly how the newer men will work out.

Batt said that he will rely on several pitchers including veterans Pete Ensor, Bill Jones, and Bob Kliphon. He is also keeping his eye on two promising freshmen, Dick Blessing and Dick Mann. Behind the plate Batt will use Don DiGiulian and Art Melius.

Scott Finegan will probably be used in the outfield this season, so the first base position will be left open. Presently there are two strong contenders for the position, freshmen Al Ahrens and Doug Kirkpatrick. Both of these men have looked good during the workouts of the past week, and Batt feels that the battle for this position will be the keenest of all those on the diamond this year.

Pogo Collins and freshman Jim Fanning will be vying for the starting position at second base. Captain Mike Slattery will hold down the third base slot.

Batt said that two men are also contending for the short stop position. Gary Ennis, a freshman, has been looking good in practice, but Bruce Hopkins will be pushing him for the starting position.

In the outfield Batt has veterans Rick Purple, Norm Daily, Marty Hirsch, and Joe Nicolette. He may also count on several other men including five promising freshmen.

As the team shapes up right now Batt feels that the club will be able to turn in a good record for the season. Outdoor practice, of course, will have some effect on the line-up as Batt will be able to better judge the abilities of the freshmen.

Golf Team Begins Informal Practice

The golf team, which had a 7 - 3 record last year, has already begun informal practice in the gym. Coach Don Jones hopes to begin formal outdoor practice immediately after spring vacation.

The opening match will be against Harpur College at Clinton on Apr. 26.

This year's squad will be paced by captain Ward Wettlaufer. Wettlaufer was the 1956 Tam-O-Shanter amateur champion and was runner up in the 1957 National Intercollegiate Golf Tournament. Dick Jackson, Doug Trenner, Carl Hakanson, Dick Merkelbach, Peter Hankin, Tom Aitken and Jerry Walsh will be among the contenders for the other starting positions.

Ten Tennis Men Start Practicing

The tennis team, which had a 7-1 record last year, began indoor practice this week. They have lost four matches in the last seven years.

Coach Mox Weber said Tuesday that the loss of two of his lettermen would leave a large vacancy on the squad. Although only 10 men have come out for practice, Weber still hopes to have the gap filled before the opening match against Harpur.

Returning lettermen are Gerry Dirvin, Don Kittel, Chris Ravndahl, and Tim Smelzer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR –

Doubts Committee's Insight

The Delta Phi House
March 20, 1958

To the Editor:

Unless it is to be as dangerous and inadequate as the proposal of the Deferred Rushing Committee, any meddling with this College's fraternity system must first square itself with two facts:

1. A proposal similar to the one sired by the Trustees and born blue and puny of the Committee can only fortify existing illiberality.
2. Any significant improvement of the system made in accordance with the highest principle of liberal education simply lies outside the undergraduate competence.

If one could conceive anything more natural than the way Hamilton fraternities rush and pledge at present, it is the way they will when given several additional months in which to work.

For the most part, the heterogeneity of any fraternity, or even of the Independents, is entirely mythical; and, with a semester or so of mutual sorting for freshmen and fraternities, one may reasonably expect more gravitation and "selectivity," more intra-house congeniality than ever before—despite occasional anomalies.

Impossibles Glut

As always, men of like purpose and, to some extent, background will collect in one or two houses. Should a man be sufficiently indistinctive or "impossible," he will become part of the residue that will glut houses of equal indistinction and spill, without much effect, into a few others.

To the injury, then, of his own education, each man becomes the "invited" and finds his niche. In the classroom, he will be exposed both to the scientific and every other critical method and to the notion that any discipline is insufficient in itself—the two foundations of the liberal concept.

But the same man will inevitably spend most of the remainder of his time in an unassessable extension of the same social complex which produced him and to which, after four years, he will probably return.

Whether a fraternity presently draws 80 per cent of its members from private schools, maintains a "credit" average, or is three-fourths composed of varsity athletes, it has, very loosely, its own "ethic," even if this be only a chauvinistic drive to achieve harmony in face of the greatest physical disparity.

Deprivation Illiberal

Obviously, then, the student is deprived of the opportunity not only to understand psychologies different from his own but also to evaluate an important part of his own culture.

And this deprivation—even if voluntary and, in the rare instance, conducive to academic success—is patently contrary to the liberal idea.

Despite the abstractness of the argument, its application to the Hamilton situation should be immediately evident. At the request of the Senate itself, the faculty, responsible by charter for the intellectual and social growth of every student, should undertake presentation to the Trustees of a plan for realistic social facilities compatible, at the same time, with its general view of education.

The faculty alone can do this, for the undergraduate body, naturally, can effect no material change to a system on which it believes itself thoroughly dependent.

Has No Place

Certainly, in any proper plan, the Committee's proposal has no place. It si inadequate because, while it may succeed in harassing several fraternities, it does not touch the heart of the problem.

It is dangerous, even, in that it may delay a genuine improvement through the psychological effect of giving fraternities a liberal appearance: this, on hte sole ground that no one has been denied a "social outlet" because of color, creed, or length of last name.

The depth of the real problem, however,, and the irony of the proposal is barely indicated by the fact that every Hamilton fraternity has, at one time or another, rushed men of the so-called minority groups.

Proposal Foolish

At this tme, any middle-of-the-road proposal is per se as foolish and inconsistent as the one which maintains the pretense of a fraternity system gutted by "100 per cent opportunity."

That forbearance is often the better part of wisdom seems a commonplace. The Senate would not be unwise,, perhaps, in setting aside the present proposal and saying to the the faculty: the matter is beyond our competence; do what you can for the non-fraternity man; as for the real trouble, we can only hint.

Otherwise, the Senate will be guilty, one suspects, of doing for a minor issue what Time recently charged Lyndon Johnson with doing for a major one: "building it bigger and better — hoping that it will do the same for him."

Brit Harwood, '58

Student Criticizes 100% Plan

Dear Editor:

It would seem that in recent discussions of the proposed system for 100 per cent opportunity rushing, those who have argued both for and against the institution of such a system are more concerned with irrelevancies than with the basic issue involved.

Many students for example, seem to feel that, since the proposal for 100 per cent opportunity follows on the heels of the recently adopted plan for deferred rushing, it is the logical solution for the many problems which a semester-long rushing period would present. This, however, is not true.

The problems that will accrue from deferred rushing are (1) that upperclassman - freshman relations will be strained and artificial for an extended period of time, due to more stringent rules on dirty rushing; (2) that the strong houses will grow stronger, the weak houses, weaker, since rushees will have more time to evaluate the individual merits of each house; (3) that the houses will have difficulty operating economically, since, only the upper three classes will be contributing to the fraternity board departments.

Reduce Competition

Other difficulties, of course, may be encountered; but it would seem that the three listed above are of primary concern. In what way, precisely, can a system of 100 per cent opportunity alleviate any one of these three problems? By reducing the competitive factor in rushing, and thereby provide for a more natural relationship between the upperclassmen and freshmen? Certainly not.

Under the system of preferenial bidding that will accompany the plan for 100 per cent opportunity, competition will be just as if not more intense than it is under the present rushing system. Rushees will list in order of preference each of the 11 fraternities on the Hill.

Fraternity Lists

Each fraternity will then compose a list of rushees, also in order of preference. This list will be well above the house quota, since some houses, at least, will not get each of the men that they want. When the two lists are compared, the men considered least desirable by the fraternities will bounce down to those fraternities considered least desirable by the rushees.

Thus the strong will grow stronger, the weak, weaker, and the element of competition will not be reduced, in spite of 100 per cent opportunity. Insofar as the financial problem is concerned, each house will simply pledge more men to build up an upperclassman reserve that will compensate or the freshmen, who will not be paying board bills.

With deferred rushing, therefore, a greater percentage of the freshman class will be pledged by fraternities than would ordinarily be pledged under a system of immediate rushing. This will occur with or wihtout a plan for 100% opportunity.

Basic Issue

We have now arrived at what was earlier referred to as the basic issue: What is to be done with the small percentage of men (certainly no more than five per cent) who are not pledged by fraternities? It is for the benefit of this five per cent that 100 per cent opportunity has been proposed, and for this reason only.

Not as a cure for the evils of deferred rushing. Not as a financial godsend to the fraternities. Simply as a means of providing for the men who are not accepted into the college's social organization—a problem, incidentally, that is not peculiar to deferred rushing, but one which confronts us under the present system of immediate rushing.

We need only to decide, then, whether it is morally right — and socially realistic — for these men to be forced upon the fraternities—and forced they will be, regardless of the small percentage involved; or whether the responsibility of providing these men with adequate social facilities might not, perhaps, lie with the College, rather than the fraternities.

Sincerely,
Michael J. Gillespie

Total Opportunity . . .

Senate represents as completely as possible the student body."

Caldwell disputed Stanton's definition of a fraternity. He claimed that there were moments when he did not feel happy over the prospects of bringing certain of his fraternity brothers "home to Mama."

No Unhappy Souls

He stated that the "unhappy souls" whom Stanton claimed would result were not to be found on either the Williams or Amherst campus, despite the presence of Total Opportunity there. At Williams and Amherst the fraternities confronted with this problem have "preserved their dignity" by assimilating unwelcome freshmen. The group, Caldwell said, has the opportunity to prove its benefit to the individual in educating him in social life, while we at Hamlton ignore them. In the process of this assimilation, the fraternities themselves are strengthened, he added.

No Social Center

Caldwell said that a good deal of the fault lies with the college, since it is unwilling to provide for the social life of the independent. "We all know, however, that the college will not build a 2 million dollar social center, as did Williams," he said. "Knowing this, we can't beg the issue. The college has thrust the burden for social life upon the fraternities."

Flanagan spoke of his fear that if the committee's plan is adopted, nothing further will follow. The plan, based on a compromise of principle, will become "the be-all and end-all." Apathy will result among the students in regard to the abolition of discrimination. Flanagan concluded with the sentiment that this should be made a "complete" program.

Better Part Way

Tim Scholl, the fifth member of the committee, took issue with Flanagan. Scholl claimed that going three quarters of the way was far better than going none at all.

Since the Trustees would not support such a radical program as that of Flanagan's, Scholl said, we should rather concentrate on a plan that would be acceptable to all. He claimed that such a plan has been adopted by the majority of the committee.

Hawkes seconded Scholl's suggestion, again stressing the practicability of the committee's plan. Because "people don't change overnight, a radical plan could not go through at this time." On this point the discussion closed.

Seniors Choose Trust Fund Gift

The class of 1958 will present the College with a common trust fund, Class President John Driscoll said Wednesday.

The fund will provide the college with approximately 1,400 dollars at the end of 25 years and will cost each senior about five dollars. The money collected will be invested by the Stein, Rowe and Farhan Investment Co. at five and one-half per cent interest

Driscoll said the common trust fund is an excellent class gift because it will provide the College with more money in the long run than any other investment plan. He said he hoped that the class would add to the dividend at its twenty-fifth reunion.

A majority of seniors chose the common trust fund plan from four possible plans. Other plans considered were: a 100 per cent contribution to the Alumni Fund, a short range premium insurance plan and a long range full insurance plan.

Likes Total Opportunity Plan

To Fraternity Men:

Although in theory selectivity will be impaired by the proposed system of 100 per cent opportunity rushing, in practice the fraternities can expect an actual increase in selectivity over that found in our present system.

Wednesday, I asked a fraternity member how selectivity worked out now in his fraternity. After consideration, he estimated that 25 per cent of the average pledge class would not have ended up in his house if our present system allowed more time to judge and choose prospective members.

Some may have been happier in another fraternity; some may have been sorted out as unsuitable. This man's judgment is backed up by a year's experience as pledge trainer and he is now a rushing chairman.

Definition Ruined

That fraternity's selectivity is about 75 per cent efficient. This percentage represents the status quo and has not been so bad as to ruin that house's definition of fraternity.

Under deferred rushing, our selectivity of the men we pledge by preferential listings will be highly efficient—we won't bid anyone we don't know fairly well.

If deferred rushing should be augmented by 100 per cent opportunity, how would selectivity turn out?

The answer is startling. By authoritative estimate, there may be as many as 180 freshmen who indicate a desire to join fraternities. Assuming that they be evenly divided among only 11 fraternities (nationals and ELS), this leaves pledge quotas averaging 16 men per house.

This class will represent a third of the active membership since only the three upper lcasses dine in the houses and contribute to social revenue. If no upperclassmen flunk out, the average house will have 48 paying members. But what has this to do with selectivity?

Necessity Rules

Plenty! The fraternities will, through economic necessity bid nearly all the freshman class. I would suggest that no more than 12 men will be unchosen. To selectivity, this number is vital. Nevertheless, I believe that this estimate will be borne out in practice.

If we assume that six houses do not fill their quotas, and cooperatively accept the dozen unchosen men, no house should be required to take more than two of the freshmen it originally did not select. Here, selectivity is impaired—let's see how much.

In a class of 16 men we have been 87 per cent efficient in our selectivity. Houses who fill their quotas voluntarily will have been totally efficient. The result is that a house forced to accept men in the presidents' meeting may still have selected its members 15 per cent more effectively than at present. The other houses will have had wholly efficient selectivity.

Plans Mars Selectivity

The proposed plan will mar ideal selectivity from 0 to 10 per cent; and it may provide partial protection for racial or religious discrimination in the short run.

Nevertheless, from the fraternity's viewpoint, it is still an improvement over the present system if only in respect to selectivity. Since this principle lies at the heart of the definition of the fraternity it would seem to our advantage to seize this opportunity to improve our fraternity system.

As to the desirability of 100 per cent opportunity over our present system from the viewpoint of four dozen Hamilton undergraduates not offered the social opportunities they had reasonably hoped for, there can be no question.
